2. INTRODUCTION

Sport and recreation forms an integral part of the physical and psychological preparation and conditioning of employees. Physical fitness is achieved through physical training programmes, which include sport and recreational activities. It is not always possible to attain the required state of physical preparedness only by physical training. In order to supplement physical training, employees participate in sport and recreational activities.

This policy is for employees in the Department of Roads and Public Works who participate in Departmental sporting and recreational activities for the purpose of relaxation, personal satisfaction, physical health, emotional growth, and development.

Sport ought to be harnessed to add value to the workplace as a large portion of our time is spent at work. Sport can contribute to lowering tension, fatigue and general anxiety in the workplace, thus leading to increased productivity.
